diseases. And, you know, I'm...and a registry is a very important part of that and I would hate to see the...any positive research be impacted, as well as the grants. And I just want to make sure that everybody who would be involved in these registries is on board and fully supportive of your concept.

SENATOR SCHIMEK: And from those groups that I named, Senator Bourne, I mean I can't imagine that any...any of them wouldn't want to have the process that works the best for both the patient and...well, the patient and the researcher and everybody else that might be connected in one way or the other. The main thing this does is it takes the doctor out of the equation. And it provides that the...

SENATOR KRISTENSEN: One minute.

SENATOR SCHIMEK: ...registry and the researcher can go to the person and the family.

SENATOR BOURNE: My concern, Senator Schimek, is we go forward and adopt your amendment, and the bills on Final Reading. And say opposition came up between now and Final Reading, and I realize we're getting to the last days here, but, I mean, are you still agreeable to working out the details and not going forward unless there is a consensus?

SENATOR SCHIMEK: Absolutely. And I did...when I talked with Senator Erdman a few minutes ago, I told him I would be very reluctant to change this unless you brought all the groups back together again. I think they have worked hard to find this agreement. I mean it was not easy.

SENATOR BOURNE: Right. I agree with you that we change these in a very careful, cautious manner so...

SENATOR SCHIMEK: Right, right.

SENATOR BOURNE: ...thank you very much.

SENATOR SCHIMEK: Yes.
